

2012

Rémy Prud'homme

Rémy Prud'homme studied business administration and economics at the University of Paris and at Harvard. He has been a Professor of economics at the Universities of Phnom-Penh, Lille, and Paris XII (since 1977) where he is now Professor emeritus. He has also been Visiting Professor at the MIT (1982-83, 1988-89, 1998, 2002). For several years, he worked with the OECD, as deputy-director of the Environment directorate. His main interests are in public finance and in transportation economics. He has been a frequent consultant to a number of governments, enterprises, and international organizations, particularly the World Bank, where he was invited as a Visiting Research Scholar, but also the European Union, the OECD, or the Inter-American Development Bank. He served on the board of the International Institute of Public Finance, and of the French Economic Association. He has written a number of scholarly books and papers, and contributed more than 100 articles to Le Monde, Le Figaro, Les Echos, the leading French dailies. Additional information can be found on his site: www.rprudhomme.com